Publishers to Present Case.

A promise was made to the commission by F. B. Glass, vice president of the Newspaper Publishers' Association, that within sixty days the association will place in concise from before the com-mission its findings and that he believes that it will present legal proof that a conspiracy exists among the manu-facturers, to force up the price of paper. To determine whether there was an undue increase in the cost price of news print paper, the Senate ordered the com-mission to make the investigation which started yesterday morning.

Publishers of two thousand daily news-

Some consternation was caused when Mr. Zerbey made the statement that the manufacturer was in the room who told him their concern was holding more than a million dollars' worth of print paper.

Small Publishers "Squeezed." Mr. Zerbey said he queried thirty or forty manufacturers in regard to a supply and received only three responses. The correspondence showed him, he said, that the manufacturers had a clearance house of information. Despite extravagant offers of advance payment, he could get no paper except through his original source and two small jobbers. He found out that one large manufacturer, on his own testimony, was holding more than a number of small publishers were being "squeezed." He was told "from all sides" to "buy paper at any price." He said he used to pay $2.04 f. o. b. his office and now to one broker he is paying $3.52.

Replying to Mr. Zerbey, P. T. Dodge interrupted the speaker to say that in his reference to him and the statement regarding the admission and asked that this paper in reality was being held for the protection of the publishers.

Mr. Zerbey said that the reasons given were fire, or some such calamity; but stated that, in his belief, if one manufacturer was holding a million dollars' worth, others were doing the same.

Baltimore Youth Capsizes in Canoe While Fishing Alone in Bay. All Efforts at Rescue Futile.

Special to The Washington Herald.

Baltimore, Aug. 1.—Reaching over the side of a canoe from which he was fishing alone off the Alva Shore near Dundalk, this morning, Walter G. Lotterer. 20 years old, 1201 East North avenue, slipped into the water and was drowned in plain view of his mother and father and friends on the shore

The splash caused by his body striking the water attracted the attention of those standing along the shore and just as he sank a number of his friends, among them his particular chum, Frank Lotz, jumped into the water and swam frantically toward the spot.

Lotterer did not come to the surface again, and the men in the water spent many minutes diving in an effort to reach the body. It was brought to the surface about half an hour later and carried to the shore. Efforts at resuscitation proved futile.

Lotterer had gone to the shore with a number of frends to spend a vacation of several weeks. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Christian G. Lotterer, saw their son drown and were restrained with difficulty from jumping into the water.
